Communication Templates Bundle

Pre-written messages for the conversations that take more energy than they should.

Customise on a good day, so the words already exist on a bad one.

How to use this bundle

Start here

Open Printables/Bad-Day-Protocol.pdf first - that's the fridge-door / partner / housemate version. Then save the editable templates somewhere easy to reach: Notes app, email drafts, pinned message, Notion, Google Docs - wherever you'll actually find them on a low-capacity day.

What's in this ZIP

- Printables/Overview.pdf - bundle overview.
- Printables/Decision-Card.pdf - quick reference.
- Printables/Bad-Day-Protocol.pdf - bad-day worksheet.
- Printables/Signal-and-Status.pdf - status templates.
- Printables/Conversation-Guide.pdf - dialogue guide.
- Editable-Templates/1-Cancellations/ - cancellation texts.
- Editable-Templates/2-Boundaries/ - boundary texts.
- Editable-Templates/3-Recovery-Days/ - recovery day texts.

How to use these

- Customise on a good day.
- Save where you can reach them.
- Copy, paste, send on a bad day.
- Delete any sentence that sounds unlike you.
- Keep the version that is brief enough to use.

Worth remembering:

The template does not have to sound perfect. It has to exist before the bad day arrives.

About neurodivers³

neurodivers³ is a home for honest stories, practical tools, and ideas for making everyday life work better with a neurodivergent brain. I make resources for late-diagnosed and self-identified neurodivergent adults who are tired of being told to try harder at systems that were never built for them. This guide is not a clinical tool. It is a practical one. Use what helps; leave what does not.
